tion for exclusive features.

April fool jokes are hardly relished during the month of January, but here is a story going the rounds which has to do with the exclusive Chevy Chase Club, and it's a scream, incidentally the talk of the town, or, to be correct, the District of Columbia. Ice skating as a fad has hit New York an awful wallop. In fact, they even flood the hotel roofs to provide ice for the smart set of Gotham.

Conceiving the idea that the Chevy Chase Club should keep step with the times, certain members recently got their heads together and decided that an exclusive ice-skating course would be the proper caper, but because of the style of architecture characteristic of the clubhouse it was found that a flooded roof would be out of the question, so the brilliant scheme was concocted of banking the tennis courts and laying thereon a covering of tarred paper, flooding the place, and leaving the rest to Jack Frost.

In order to install this miniature lake, an expenditure of $300 was found necessary; but what's $300 to less time than it takes to tell the story. Sure enough, Jack Frost did the business, and during the recent cold snap the flooded tennis courts presented the finest little skating surface one could desire, and everything was set for a real party.

Those members of the Chevy Chase Club who had cut "figure eights" and "grape vines" on the ice during their youthful days made a grand rush for Washington's sporting goods emporium, eager to invest in ice skates. The rush for skates was so sudden that the clerk .

who was surrounded by some of our very best citizens could hardly catch his breath, and in consternation stammered that there wasn't a pair of ice skates in the store, but if the boys would wait a few days he would have plenty. The next day it rained.

That's the story, and there is nothing more to tell. Chevy Chase clubmen had the ice, also the inclination to skate, but could not get the steel runners.
